(Mirror No. 1) 9d97204299 A mineraloid is a mineral-like substance that does not show crystallinity. According to the chemical structure, it is a combination of carbon with inorganic acids. The mineraloid is similar in appearance to glass, some minerals are similar in appearance to glass. As a rule, mineraloids are formed on the surface of the Earth, at the bottom of the oceans, in volcanic gases and in the interaction of sedimentary or volcanic rocks with solutions containing acids. They have a hard amorphous structure with an amorphous metallic sheen and do not reflect light like crystals.
